ORLOFF BROTHERS

FINE ENTERTAINMENT AT THE QUEEN'S

"THE COSSACK'S FAREWELL"

The Orloff Brothers, the clever balalaika and guitar entertainers, continue to appear at the Queen's Theatre (in addition to the film).

The Orloff Brothers' last programme was a great success. Their best item was undoubtedly "The Cossack's Farewell." The warrior's emotions of mind were fully expressed on their primitive musical instruments. The song, now slow and full of sorrowful melodies, now quick and vivacious, involuntarily pictures the passionate struggle of two powerful elements ingrained deep down in his heart; sacred, but human and flaming love of his betrothed and boundless patriotism, but last, passion is stronger in him and he, choking all his emotions, leaves at his own will his "fated" and gallops with a merry march on a long way to fight the Turks for the sake of his religion and his motherland.

The new programme, which will be presented to-day and tomorrow, includes, "The Refugee's lamentation," waltz, words and music being by the Orloff Brothers.

The second number is "Pot Pourri," the composition of the most merry Russian rustic songs and the last one is "The Moon is Shining" (popular choral song). The Orloff Brothers, who are known in Shanghai not only as musicians but as artists, painters, and poets are going to Europe to complete their studies in one of the Universities.

JAPAN'S NAVY

APPROXIMATE COSTS AT A GLANCE

POSITION AFTER 1931

Tokyo, Feb. 26.

In a recent discussion in the Diet on the subject of naval construction after 1931, it was recalled that, in the years immediately preceding the Washington Conference, expenditure on the armed forces of the country accounted for nearly 50 per cent. of the national budget, naval construction alone costing more than Y.270,000,000 a year.

Thanks to the Washington Agreement Japan was able to make a drastic cut in this terrible drain on her financial resources and, although the fiscal year 1922-3, which followed too close on the heels of the Conference to enable any revision to be effected, still called for as much as Y.225,269,000 for naval construction, the annual outlay on this score since then has averaged only Y.88,000,000 or thereabouts, despite the new programmes instituted in the meantime. These programmes, if we include those merely revised and also the 1926-9 preliminary portion of the auxiliary replacement programme, are four in number. How the cost of these four has been, and is still being, spread out, may best be shown by the following table of approximate costs:

Revised "8-8" Auxiliary Ships
1923-24 Y.52,252,192 Y.39,010,287
1924-25 32,000,000 57,816,000
1925-26 31,194,425 56,905,575
1926-27 8,000,000 72,000,000
1927-28 — 75,000,000
1928-29 — 68,237,230
1929-30 — —
1930-31 — —
1931-32 — —

Auxiliary Replacement
Preliminary Main
1923-24 — —
1924-25 — —
1925-26 — —
1926-27 Y.8,000,000 Y.4,725,000
1927-28 10,000,000 11,225,000
1928-29 8,000,000 88,000,000
1929-30 — 88,000,000
1930-31 — 88,000,000
1931-32 — 68,557,000

The first of these four programmes requires little explanation. Japan had planned to maintain permanently a capital fleet of eight battleships and eight battle-cruisers (the famous "8-8" Programme), all of modern type; but as a result of the Washington Conference she agreed to cancel fourteen of her new capital ships. The curtailed programme was therefore rounded off by the appropriations as shown above.

Additional, however, to these great ships, provision has also been made for the construction of a large number of auxiliary craft, these forming as integral a part of the "8-8" Programme as did the "Dreadnoughts." Under this plan, 9 cruisers, 37 destroyers, and 46 submarines were to be built; but these numbers were, in consequence of the agreement reached at Washington, cut down to 8 cruisers, 24 destroyers, and 22 submarines, the appropriations for their construction being spread out, as shown, to 1929 (originally to 1928, but extended by one year on account of the Earthquake). The sacrifice entailed by this cut was undoubtedly considerable, though not perhaps so great as these figures would indicate; for although the contemplated 92 auxiliary vessels were reduced in number to 54, their total tonnage was reduced but little, as most of the ships retained for construction were redesigned on a larger scale.

By means of this auxiliary ship programme the balance of the Japanese fleet was adjusted to meet the requirements of national defence, as hitherto the proportion of auxiliary craft to capital ships had been unduly small. The so-called replacement programme drawn up subsequently was intended to maintain the balance thus achieved, by replacing all auxiliary vessels as soon as they attain their age limit. Plans for this replacement programme began to take definite shape in 1925 and called for a further expenditure of Y.320,000,000. The Finance Department, however, declared that under the financial circumstances of the time it was impossible to find the amount demanded. A Cabinet crisis thereupon arose, and the Ministry was only saved from a serious split by the personal intervention of the Premier between the heads of the two departments concerned. By the compromise thereby effected, provision was made for the construction of four destroyers during the three-year period 1926-28 at a total cost of Y.28,000,000, and a year later the major part of the programme originally planned was sanctioned. Including the four destroyers sanctioned in 1926, this allows for the construction of four 1,000-ton destroyers, 19 destroyers, 4 submarines, 2 gunboats, one transport carrier, and one mine-sweeper by the end of the fiscal year 1931-32, at a total estimated cost of Y.287,898,000, as against the original demand for four cruisers, 20 destroyers, 5 submarines, 8 gunboats, and five special service ships by 1930-1 at a cost of Y.320,000,000.

The total estimated expenditure on auxiliary ship construction between the fiscal years 1923-4 (when the agreements reached at Washington first made their effect shown) and 1931-2 is therefore, according to the original estimates already quoted, Y.646,277,302. Actually, however, these estimates appear to have been about Y.20,000,000 too small, as, according to figures just obtained by Reuters from the Japanese Navy Department, the total already spent (1923-3) is Y.481,398,465, and a further Y.244,657,070 is to be spent during the next three-year period ending April 1st 1932, thus bringing it to Y.676,055,535 in all.

What further construction will be carried out after that date will depend entirely on the outcome of the Arms Conference due to meet in 1931 (or possibly earlier) to consider the extension and revision of the Washington Treaty.—Reuters Pacific Service.

Reorganisation Proposed at Annual Meeting

The Hong Kong Lawn Tennis Association held its annual meeting yesterday evening. Mr. H. R. B. Hancock presided.

The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. H. R. B. Hancock; Vice-President, Mr. M. K. Lo; Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. D. S. Green.

The chairman said that the question had been brought forward as to the advisability of forming a "D" Division, in view of the great number of players taking part in the "C" Division.

It was decided to leave the matter to the Committee, who would decide as soon as the number of entries was known. It was also decided that each club should be allowed to enter only one team in each division.

The chairman said that it was desired that the Association be put on a proper standing with rules of its own.

The following were elected on the committee to carry out the necessary work entailed.—S. A. Rumjahn, C. W. Sewell, R. E. Tottenham, C. F. Lee, S. E. Green, J. Abe and T. Armstrong.

It was decided that the closing date for entries should be March 15, and that the League should start on April 6.

The chairman mentioned that the Dunlop Rubber Company had offered a shield for a Mixed Doubles League, but it was decided to leave the matter to the committee.

October 15 propping the official

15, 1928. Another month elapses and then officialdom remembers those letters that were receiving "consideration" as far back as June and forthwith and at once and without any more waste of valuable time answers both letters—June 19 and October 15!

In view of the foregoing it is refreshing to turn to a letter written on June 19, 1928, to the Deputy Superintendent of Police regarding a "blind" corner and find that actually on the same day a reply was written stating that instructions had already been issued agreeing to the K.R.A.'s suggestion regarding traffic. There may have been no big crimes that day, or there may have been no conflagrations, or there may have been an absence of beggars or hawkers to rope in—but the fact remains that promptitude was observed in dealing with correspondence from a public body.
This example, by the way, could be followed with advantage by many business firms, whose dilatory methods of dealing with correspondence is heart-breaking sometimes. The most business-like firm in this respect is, perhaps, the Gas Company—but, then, what can you expect from an office where "gas" is so cheap?

CINDERELLA DANCE
GAY EVENING AT EN-GINEERS' INSTITUTE
"AUSTRITY FORSAKEN"

The members of the Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders frankly and freely forsook their austerity, eschewed lectures on lubrication and other abstruse subjects and just frolicked last night.

Their frivolity took the form of a Cinderella Dance in the newly decorated ball-room of the Institution. The reason of this outburst of gaiety was to show their friends what a nice "comfy" little Institute it is before the local steam launches have done their deadly work of covering everything with their sombre grey smoke clouds.

Over a hundred people assembled and danced to the strains of delightful music provided by the Brunswick Orchestra. The programme comprised items to suit
the tastes of all present.

Mr. Willie Brown, as M.C., was in his element and, naturally, under his supervision everything went like the proverbial wooden clock, which recorded the time all too quickly, like the speedometer of the new taxi-cabs, so that midnight overtook the revellers unaware and many regrets were expressed when it was time to go home.

The catering was in the capable hands of Messrs. Lane, Crawford, Ltd., and the wine cellar was looked after by the veteran, Mr. G. J.
Harman, who provided the most delightful of refreshments. The lighting and decorations by Mr.
J. M. Jack transformed the lecture hall into a veritable fairyland. Messrs. Pilgrim and G. F.
Taylor deserve the warmest thanks for their organisation of the function. The dancing floor was in the best of condition.—

"DEWARISMS"

Lord Dewar is one of our greatest living dramatists. Here are a few of his bon mots:

Brevity to-day is the soul of the frock-maker.

Eating apples may keep the doctor away but it started dressmakers in business.

Train up a housemaid in the way she should go, and the first thing you know she's gone.

It is a woman's duty to provide for the inner man and a man's to provide for the outer woman.

A husband should tell his wife everything that he is sure she will find out, and before anyone else does.

If husbands went everywhere
their wives told them to go, there would be fewer divorcees but more widows.

What is better than man?
Wisdom. And what is better than wisdom? Woman. And what is better than woman?
Nothing.

JURORS' LIST

The Jurors' List for 1929 appears in the "Gazette," including names of 55 special jurors.

P'RAPS-P'RAPS NOT!

Waiter (after customer has rung for 10 minutes): "Did you ring, sir?"
Customer: "No, I was only tolling: I thought you were dead."

Doctor: "Yes, real active exercise is what you need. Motoring would provide you with just the right."

Patient: "But, doctor, I can't possibly afford a car."

Doctor: "Who spoke about buying? I mean you to dodge 'em."

A commercial traveller in Shetland held up by a storm telegraphed to his firm in Aberdeen:
"Marooned here by storm. Wire instructions."

Came the reply: "Start summer holidays from yesterday."

Foreman: "Now Murphy what about carrying some bricks?" Murphy: "I'm not feeling well,
sir. I'm trembling all over."

Foreman: "Well, then, get busy with the sieve."

"Is your new car fast?"
"Fast? Why, if I want to go from London to Brighton I have to start putting on the brakes
at half-way."

Mean Patron (in billiards room): "These cues want tipping very badly."
Marker: "Yes, sir; I know.
That's just how I feel."

Young Man (shaking hands with small girl): "Excuse my gloves."
Girl: "Oh, it's all right. Mine are in holes, too."

Young Husband: "Why Mabel,
what are you crying about?"
Wife: "Oh, Tom, I'm afraid the baby is going to grow up to be a boxer. Look how he clenches his fists."

"Oh! Please, ma'am," gasped
the nursemaid, "I've lost little Nora!"
"Gracious girl! Why didn't you speak to a policeman?"

"I was speaking to one at the time, ma'am."

They had just turned the corner in the car away from one of the most beautiful steep valleys in the West Country.
She exclaimed—"What a beautiful gorge that was!"

"Yes, it wasn't bad," he replied, his mind flashing back to the little village and the inn in the hollow,
"but I could have done with a bit more pudding."

Host: "You know it is said that the mustard people make their money, not by what is eaten, but by what is left on the sides of the plates."

Fair Guest: "Yes; but what always puzzles me is how they collect it!"

Father: "Didn't I see you sitting on that young man's lap
when I passed the parlour door
last evening?"

Daughter: "Yes, and it was very embarrassing. I wish you had not told me to."

"Good heavens! I never told you to do anything of the kind."
"You did. You told me that if he tried to kiss me I must sit on him."

"Can any boy in the class tell me what harness is?" asked the teacher.

Not a single boy knew.
"Well," continued the teacher,
"is there any boy in the class whose father works among horses?"

"Please, teacher, mine does,"
said one pupil.

"Well, what is it that your father puts on horses every day?"
"Please, teacher, every half-penny he's got."

Mr. Septimus Tiddkiss had one secret from his wife. She hated golf, and had made him promise never to indulge in this wrecker of home life, but he played it frequently on the quiet. It had got him in its grip, but he dare not let her know. One day a letter arrived at his semi-detached address to him, and his wife sat at the other side of the dining table and watched him slowly open it. He knew that handwriting, and guessed what the contents would be.

"Dear Sep," he read, the while his wife tried to glimpse it, but failed. "I shall have to-morrow afternoon off for another round on the links if you can manage it.
Hope the wife does not see this and put the stopper on our game."
—Your old pal, William.

Mr. Tiddkiss replaced the letter in the envelope, signed wearily and looked the picture of a harassed householder.

What Mrs. Tiddkiss queried his wondering wife was the name of the club. The usual thing was the

STILL WATERS

Apparently anxious Band on "to get into print" as soon as possible a friend, in Shameen addresses to the writer of this column a letter—quite too long to print here—in support of a suggestion thrown out in last issue of the "Sunday Herald." That suggestion was regarding the possibility of the Band of the Queen's Regiment going on a tour of China before they sail for Home in the near future. The Shameen gent—or is he a lady?—professes to be an expert musician who was "simply entranced"—(that sounds like a feminine phrase)— with the Queen's Band music at the recent Bachelors' Ball in Sha-meen, and adds that the Band would assuredly get a great reception both in Shameen and Canton

City itself.

Speaking to a
Why Not? local lover of music the other night he (yes—he this time all right) said that if the Band of the Queen's Regiment do not take the suggested tour it must be because they are too modest and have no idea themselves that they have been trained to such a pitch of perfection. Why not take the trip, he asks in warm support of the idea? They'd surely give the musical folk in Shanghai and the other big cities in the North the best feast of music they've had for many a long day, and their visit would be indeed "The Talk of the Town" or "The Catch of the Season." So, Mister Bandmaster and your merry Bandmen,
what about it?

It is wonderful how Official long the contents of instance the appendices to the report of the Kowloon Residents'

"the Colonial Secretary begs to acknowledge the receipt of the Hon. Secretary's, Kowloon Residents' Association's letter of

On Thursday afternoon the amended
Smokes Tobacco Ordinance
was read a first time in the Legislative Council. It is stated in the "objects and reasons" thereto that "it is no part policy of this Ordinance to increase the duty on tobacco generally." Yet, the very next day up went the price of certain cigarettes manufactured in Shanghai and retailed here.
Before, one could get a packet of ten for five cents, but now six cents is asked. And the concern that manufactures it is not Chinese, but British, and has a Knight as Chairman and an Earl and a Brigadier-General on the Board of Directors. It does seem more than a coincidence that the rise in price should follow so closely the reading of the local amending Ordinance for the first time in the Council.

It looks, too,
"Safeguarding" as if those responsible for our local legislation have got a slight touch of the Safeguarding of Industries fever. In the same "objects and reasons" it is also asserted: "There is also the problem of the cigarette deliberately sold at a loss in order to kill competition to establish a new brand."—Why that should present a "problem" to members of the Legislative Council or even to the framers of the amended Ordinance 'tis very hard to understand.
It is, and has been for a long time, a "problem" to the man who buys cigarettes to know why he is charged more in some retail places than others for the same brand. This looks suspiciously like as if some were content to sell at a loss in order to kill competition—not with other brands, but with other retailers of the same brand. Possibly if the learned authorities were asked to look into this little matter they would report that it was none of their business!

OUR WOMEN'S SECTION

Footgear That Cost $1,000

Just to prove that shoes are as important as any other article of clothing, the Middle Atlantic Retail Shoe Dealers' Association, assembled in convention in Philadelphia, called the folks in to see this pair set with diamonds. They cost $1,000 and are the work of the country's foremost shoe artist. Neat?

Smart Accessory

Here is one of the black and white. Here is a two-piece frock of blue and white crepe that is as charming as it is simple. The skirt is of blue, box-pleated and generously cut; the over-bodice white, with diamond patterns formed by the stitching in blue.

ORGANDIE TEA-CLOTHS

The fancy for table-cloths and table napkins of organdie for special occasions is of Italian origin. These may be made very easily at home and, being a novelty, their making is quite an interesting and inexpensive pastime. All that is required is the necessary length of organdie, linen floss and an embroidery frame.

The organdie is first cut to shape, circular, square or scalloped and bordered round the edges with blanket stitch in white floss. The embroidery designs for the centre are most effective if somewhat heavy, making a strong contrast to the delicacy of the back ground. An animal, such as the deer, is suggested as making a striking silhouette.

Designs look best when spaced in from the edge sufficiently to give a fairly deep border of organdie between the blanket stitch and the pattern. These cloths are easily laundered and retain their delightful daintiness.

TO LAUNDER VOILE

The charm of voile lies in its dainty billowy softness; unfortunately, when washed, it loses much of this attraction, becoming limp, ragged and inclined to cling. This can be rectified by the use of gum arabic. Wash the frock with a mild soap and while still wet, rinse in a solution of half a gallon of water, and a piece of gum arabic the size of an almond. Soak the gum overnight, and in the morning it will be sufficiently softened to mix readily. When the frock is dry, sprinkle and iron in the usual way, or press while still damp.

Dancing Costume

A dancing costume. — Meraud Guinness, 24, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Guinness of New York and London, who has announced her intention to wed Alvaro Cuevara, 35, famous Chilean artist.

SPOTTED FABRICS

Spotted materials are becoming more and more popular. They may be large or small, regular or irregular, and are printed on almost all materials. Many delightful little morning frocks are made of coloured or black crepe-de-chine covered with graduated white spots. At the hem of the skirt the spots are quite large, and they graduate up the figure until they become quite tiny in the upper part of the corsage.

Many frocks have long sleeves, which are finished at the wrist with turn-back lingerie cuffs, the collar and the jabot or vestee matching. One very smart frock seen recently was of black crepe-de-chine covered with tiny white spots, with a border design of circles, which were composed of even smaller spots. This frock was made on simple lines, the skirt being partly accordion pleated. A vestee, collar and cuffs were of pleated flesh pink crepe-de-chine.

Pour le Sport

Black and white crepe de chine is the material for this smart sports frock, and it is as attractive as it is fragile. It is an imported creation, with a specially designed blouse with turn-back collar of white, and pleated skirt of white.

MAKING UP

Art—And The Powder-Puff

The powder-puff can make or mar a woman's beauty; it can give a chic appearance to a homely face, and charm to the prettiest, says a woman, Chemist. Small and seemingly unimportant, it is in reality worth its weight in gold where beauty is concerned.

Among modern beauty aids in daily use there is none that is so frequently mis-used and neglected as the powder-puff. The most exotic powder is bought, while the puff that carries it to the face is often in no way in keeping with its dainty task.

There is an art in applying a puff; it should gently rest upon the skin and never be dragged. The puff must convey the powder by a series of deft touches, instead of trying to force it into the pores.

This light touch is only possible when the texture of the puff is fine beyond expression. The softest swansdown or the daintiest cotton wool make excellent puffs, but they must often be looked over to make sure there are no lumps that would destroy their worth.

The woman who can spend freely upon her beauty aids may indulge in swansdown, but where economy has to be considered cotton wool should be used, because it may be so frequently renewed. When preparing little wads to use as puffs, the wool should not be cut,

Beauty Contest

Mlle. Janina Smolinski, a Polish beauty, who has been crowned "Miss Poland" and will represent her country in the international beauty contest to be staged this year.

It should be pulled out. When the wad is too small it is apt to get lumpy quickly.

Home-Made Tips

A home-made back puff can easily be prepared by fixing a large piece of wool on to the end of a piece of whalebone, which will be found conveniently pliable to use. The wool can be fixed to the handle, in the first place, by any stickfast material and then more wool lightly bound on with white silk. The softer the puff is made the better.

When a light powder is applied it is just a matter of fancy (or finance) whether a cotton wool puff is used or a bought one, but if a heavy powder is to be applied then a wool one should certainly be the rule. Heavy powders are far more apt to wear out a puff than a light one, as they drag the fine particles of swansdown or wool together and clog them.

The bathroom puff too, can certainly be a wool one—in all cases. Every special powder should have its own puff. On no account should the same ever be used for two different ones.

The powder world is quite a realm of its own. There is practically one for every side of the daily toilet, starting with the bath powder to soften the water, to the body one that aids drying, right through the toilet to the dainty "finisher" that is dusted on just after the cream has been applied, or the heavy powder that is a part of the outdoor "make up" whose job is to protect the face from weather effects.

NEW FLORAL TRIMMINGS

Small flat-flowers such as camellias or gardenias are used in garlands to form the new shoulder sprays for evening gowns. The flowers are sewn tightly together in groups of a dozen or so with the leaves arranged in still lines all on the same side of the garland.

Chic and Charming

Here is a two piece frock of blue and white crepe that is as charming as it is simple. The skirt is of blue, box-pleated and generously cut; the over-bodice white, with diamond patterns formed by the stitching in blue.

HATS WITH CURLS

Very Latest in Paris

Parisiennes are now going to put on their hair with their hats.

As most of them sternly refuse to allow their hair to grow, and very few permit even a single lock to show under the brims of their hats, a milliner has made a new model with a profusion of soft curls—real hair—clustering up at the back of the hat.

The right side of the hat sweeps down the side of the wearer's face.

The hat is black, but the curls may vary according to the whim of each customer.

There is not the slightest fear of the wearer "losing her hair" in the street, as it is firmly attached, but whether the silky strands will stand a shower of rain remains to be seen.

For the Outdoors

Here is a sophisticated little frock of light blue silk crepe with bandings of dark blue crepe with an interesting arrangement of the neck line. It is designed for street or sports wear.

A Dashing Beach Costume

Bathing suit of velvet trunks with white printed crepe jersey and cape to match is worn to advantage by Mrs. Frank Jenkins, member of New York's "400," who is among those members of society colony wintering at Palm Beach, Fla.

DRAPED TURBANS

"Rag In Hand" Transformed Into Chic Hat

[By Francis Paget]

New York, Jan. 4.

The collapsible head-fitting turban or cap which is described as a "rag in the hand" has brought fabrics into millinery. The fad grows with increased methods in draping. The comfort of these little caps has thoroughly intrigued the fancy of the smart woman, so much so that she is ordering them in the fabric of her tailormade as well as her sports costume.

It is the fabric turban which has dared to contest the popularity of felt as it has definitely entered the hat wardrobe. The completeness of the ensemble favour has had much to do with its popularity, for with felt as a staple background, novelties are coming more and more into prominence.

Dress materials are being used for many accessories of the costume—hat, shoe, bag, scarf, and millinery designers are following this lead and working closely with apparel and accessory manufacturers. Adopting the ideas of exclusive dressmaking establishments, where the hat is made to go with each costume is the order of the day.

Specialty shops are equipped to drape these little turbans of sports silks, woollens and bandings with each costume. Women should be encouraged to have hat wardrobes next season as large, if not larger than their dress wardrobes. The white costume supplies a background for resort millinery and accessories in sports colours.

Maria Guy has used dress jersey for little turbans which have been introduced in this country by exclusive shops and which are very much an item in the mode. In bright colours they are suggested for Southern resort wear to duplicate the colour and the material of the sports frock. Other novelties in the way of materials are being used also, even printed and hand-painted silks are fashioned into turbans and duplicate the scarf used on the sports dress. It is, of course, in the sports costumes especially that one finds the duplication of material in hat and frock.—United Press.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

"China Mail" Searches The Globe For Messages

XXII.—FAITH OR CERTAINTY

[By the Rev. Dr. John A. Hutton]

All through history there has been a demand for absolute plainness in matters of faith, and all through history that demand has been refused. All through history there has been a hungering after certainty, and all through history that hunger has not been satisfied.

There are things in this life which are perfectly plain, as, for example, that two and two make four; but there is an inner significance of things which is not plain as, for example, that there is God and that we have souls.

There are things which anyone can see with the naked eye, but there are other things which are seen only by faith. Faith, therefore, however, it is to be described, is not certainty. Certainty is sight—a kind of sight of the soul—and we live by faith, not by sight.

According to Christ Himself this hunger for certainty is never a good sign. "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it but the sign of the prophet Jonas." The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation and shall condemn it, because they repented at the preaching of Jonas, and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

In the New Testament this cautionary note is struck so frequently, and illustrations are recorded so pointedly, that from the first, it would appear, the danger was perceived.

A Low Certainty
Mary, who first saw her Lord risen from the dead, wanted to cling herself at His feet, but he rebuked her saying, "Touch Me not." It is as though He had said, "You must not be certain in that way. The certainty of touch is a low certainty and has the quality of self-indulgence. The state of certainty is, in the region of the unseen, the one state of certitude and of power."

You see the same thing everywhere. There are things about Jesus which are obvious to everyone. We have more historical authority for the life of Jesus than we have for almost anything. We certainly know more about Jesus than we know about Shakespeare, for example. It is a fact that we know more about Jesus than His first disciples knew. People who were there at the time knew that Jesus lived. They heard Him speak. They saw Him do things, heal people, feed people, rebuke people, comfort people. All these things everybody who wanted to see, could see; and everybody who wanted to know, could know. There was no secrecy. No spiritual training was required, no discipline or beating of the breast, to see Jesus as He lived and moved and walked about.

Public Property
And what is true about His life is true about His death. It was in a public place. Even people who were passing by wagging their heads could see that some One was dying and they could learn Who it was. The life and death of Jesus were public property. But afterwards everything is different.

To the world as such He never appeared again! The world as such never saw Christ risen from the dead, and the world as such never will. When at length He appeared risen and alive it was never to a mass and it was never casually, but always with a certain deliberateness, with a certain selection of the person and the place; always within an atmosphere, always in response to something that had gone before.

It is very wonderful, but so it is.

And so to-day people who are not sure about things and who say they are not sure are not saying anything that is new in the history of religious thought. We are never absolutely sure of anything concerning which we say "we believe." Recall the recorded appearances of our Lord and you will see the point confirmed. The evidence is never overwhelming, never merely physical or coercive. It is always such evidence that if you like—and what a delicate region of the soul that is!—(if you like) it need not have its faith-value for you. If you like you can always put another interpretation upon it. When Mary saw Jesus she thought it was the gardener. Now if you like you can say it was the gardener, or short of that you can say that there was one of those warm, temperaments; that she was excited and not fit to judge who it was who had spoken to her.

But if you like, you can say it was, as the Church declared it was, and that it was her tears and her grief that kept her from seeing His dear form clearly and at once; but that when He said "Mary," she knew that it was her Master.

A Man's Faith
I sometimes say that a man's faith is his vote. So indeed it is in this aspect, that a man's vote ought to have behind it a man's whole personality. By putting down a cross opposite the thing or the name we vote for, we mean to say, not necessarily that that is right. What we do mean to say is: "That is what I am in for; that is what I am prepared to die for. That is my faith." If I am in for money, it means that that is my money, it means that that is my distinction, that is my faith. But if I am in for goodness, if I am in for love, for tenderness, for Christ's way of taking up this whole business of life and of dealing with it, once again that is my faith. For what I am in for, that I believe.

So it is everywhere in the New Testament. The two disciples on the way to Emmaus were joined, we are told, by a figure. It was only afterwards, and upon reflection, that they came to the great hazard as to Who that figure was. He accompanied them so far, and spoke to them in a wonderful way; and at length they entered the house together and had supper at which He broke bread. Thereupon they suddenly were reminded of something, of a day and of other circumstances in which Christ had broken bread; and just as they were about to say, "Master," He was gone! If you like you can say "they were tired." But if you like you can agree, as the Church believes, that it was Christ risen from the dead!

Saul of Tarsus
Saul of Tarsus set out on the way to Damascus, snorting blood. He was fortified with letters from the High Priest that if he found any who were Christians he might bring them bound into Jerusalem. And on the way to Damascus something happened. Nobody could deny that. We read that afterwards this wild man was led like a child. Now, if you like you can say it was epilepsy; that, like Julius Caesar, St. Paul was an epileptic. But if it was nothing more than epilepsy may we all become epileptics to the glory of God!

III.
This cry for certainty is always coming back; and always in bad times. They are never the best people who want proofs of God beyond the earnest of the Spirit.

We cannot say whether our Lord had this very tendency in view and rebuked it at the outset, when, in the circumstances I have quoted, He rebuked Mary when she wanted to touch Him. It is as though our Lord intended from the outset to teach us that our assurance must never reach the material assurance of actual touch. There are people who say that it makes them sure of the other world to hear noises and rappings and curious words, as though our beloved ones had lost the power to speak clearly and sensibly after dying. I suppose we are all differently built. For myself I should begin to wonder whether God had absolute control of this world or whether some evil spirits had not broken loose. The Christian way is harder, but it is finer, and in the long run safer for the human race. "By faith we understand."

A Leap in the Light
There are some things we cannot have until we believe them. There are certain things we do not know until they are revealed in us. I might spend hours discussing with you the amazing thing it is to have found another human heart to love you; but there is a sense in which you will never know that until it comes to you. This is true of all the big things in life, and faith is the biggest of them all. We have to take a leap in the light. Bishop Butler says, "Faith is a high degree of probability." That is to say, when you accept it and act upon it, the thing works.

The stories about the Resurrection are all different, but they converge to a point. That point we hold to be the fact of the matter. If twelve people came in and told us in various ways that something had happened down the street, we should conclude from the different reports that something had at least happened.

It is an old story that there was a time when astronomers saw the planets behaving in a certain way. They behaved quite normally, until they came to a certain region and then they seemed to behave abnormally. It was recognised that there must be some vast unperceived object there. And so all telescopes were trained upon one spot in the heavens which was supposed to be vacant, but which was exercising this influence; and as they gazed and gazed, Neptune hove in sight!

Christ Risen
As I see Saul become Paul, as I see Simon Peter—who had run away from a housemaid—stand up and say "A man must obey God rather than man;" as I see the disciples, desperate, sad, bitter, inclining for one dark moment to give way to cynicism and laughter; as I see them all coming back, coming home, coming in; and then each with a rapt countenance setting out to Scythia, to India, to Athens, to Rome and the Islands of the Sea, and everyone laying down his life—why, I am driven to the conclusion that something had happened to these men. And since they alone are competent to tell what had happened, I ask them, and they say: "We have seen the Christ risen from the dead." And that opens the Kingdom of Heaven to all believers.

To the various Benedictions in the "Sermon on the Mount," Our Lord added another: it was His last: "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." There is light enough among the mysteries of faith for those who are resolved on going on; and there is darkness enough to seem to justify those who are not ready to set out. So wrote in effect an old Father of the Church and Apologist.

And another, Ignatius, said this deep thing which touches every true believer's sense of honour: "Those who have heard the voice of God can bear His silence."

Which takes us back to our Lord's sharp and final ruling: "If they hear not Moses and the prophets neither will they be persuaded though a man rose from the dead."

BRITAIN & CHINA

able property in the Settlements would long since have passed, as it has done in every other city in China, from the hands of the civil population to those of the military free-booters.

When one stops to reflect how far-reaching must be the consequences throughout all Asia of encouraging Young China militant to believe that their country's obligations may be violated with impunity and the foreigner treated with indignity, it is difficult to account for the public apathy in these matters. It is no doubt partly due to the post-war spirit, to which Mr. T. P. O'Connor has referred, and in part to the average citizen's mental detachment from the problems of the future of the Empire.

In commercial circles, it may reasonably be ascribed to the great diminution which has taken place in our China trade, the result of American and Japanese competition, during the past twenty-five years.

Statesmanship at Fault
But its chief cause lies, I think, in the fact that, despite its unbroken record of bad faith, sordid intrigues, and rapacious venality, the Kuomintang still enjoys what one may call a "good Press" in this country and in America. Although it cannot claim credit for any single achievement of constructive reform, although it is notoriously true that in the five provinces nominally under its control the people are oppressed by every kind of illegal exaction and continually plundered by lawless soldiery and bandits; although the last remnants of civic government and financial stability are speedily being destroyed by hordes of hungry placemen, whose only object is to acquire wealth before the inevitable debacle, nevertheless public opinion in this country persists in the belief that all may yet be well.

Truth Must Be Faced
Sooner or later the truth must be faced that, in encouraging the elements of irresponsible misrule, the civilised Powers have incurred a certain moral responsibility. Their intentions were excellent, no doubt. Being pledged at Washington to a policy of conciliatory good will, they were obliged, like the ladies in Florida, to love someone, so why not the Kuomintang? But when the history of these evil days comes to be written, with the necessary detachment, it will, I think, be admitted that our statesmanship was at fault and that it would have been far better, for China and the world at large, had our sympathy and good will been manifested on behalf of the unfortunate, inarticulate Chinese people, or indeed on behalf of our merchants and missionaries, trading and living in China in accordance with Treaty, rather than for the benefit of this or that group of political adventurers.

It is an old story that there was a time when astronomers saw the planets behaving in a certain way. They behaved quite normally, until they came to a certain region and then they seemed to behave ab-

"FAUST"
A REMARKABLE GERMAN FILM
AT QUEEN'S TO-MORROW

"Faust," a German picture of a nature entirely new to the screen, will be presented as the chief attraction at the Queen's Theatre from to-morrow to Tuesday according to a special announcement in this issue.

With Emil Jannings, the famous German actor, in the leading role, the picture relates in vivid manner Goethe's immortal drama of the triumph of Good over Evil. Faust, however, in the film, is not so much the scientist and charlatan as represented in the drama of Goethe. Rather is he a friend to humanity, always seeking a new way in which to bring happiness to his fellow-beings. Enter Mephisto, who seeks to conquer the soul of Faust and dominate the earth. Faust falls under the spell of Evil and goes on a pleasure trip. Mephisto shows him all the wonderful things that may be his if he will only bow to the Devil. The tragedy of Gretchen follows, and here the story deviates from Goethe's drama. But in the end, just as Mephisto believes he has conquered the soul of Faust and so the world, Cherubim advances and disillusionises him in a startling manner.

"Faust" is a picture with a moral, and, in view of its nature as an entertainment, crowded houses should be the rule during its run at the Queen's Theatre.

THE SAMOANS

OPENING SEASON TO-MORROW AT STAR
"THE 'SIVA SIVA'"

Uncontaminated by contact with civilisation, dances which have been the real expression of a people for hundreds of years will be seen when the Samoan dancing troupe gives its opening performance to-morrow night at 9.20 in the Star Theatre.

The dances will be given in costumes of "tapa." The symphony of browns, occurring in the design in this native material, in harmony with the splendid bronze bodies of the dancers, and with the green of "ieis" about the neck and bright flowers worn over the ears of the men, gives a picture which those who have seen it declare unsurpassed.

The feature of the performance is the "Siva Siva" dance which is a collective dance given seated on long lines of woven mats. The war knives of the Samoans have a long hook on the end of the blade, formerly used to catch up the head of the victims. During "The Knife Dance," these knives are hooked into each other and whirled about the head at an alarming speed.

Altogether, a most unusual form of entertainment is promised, and to-morrow night should see a crowded house at the Star. There will be a short picture programme before the dances.

A new play, "Miss Efficiency," by Olive Tension, was performed by the Nameless Company at Guildford, Surrey. It was the author's first play.

PRIZE DAY

DIOCESAN GIRLS' SCHOOL CEREMONY

EXCELLENT REPORT

Yesterday was Prize Day at the Diocesan Girls' School. The ceremony of giving away the awards was performed by Mr. W. W. Hornell, Vice-Chancellor of the Hong Kong University, in the presence of a large gathering of parents and friends.

Miss H. D. Sawyer, head mistress, read the School report which stated, inter alia, that the year was begun with a very full school and the numbers kept up so well that they had a larger average attendance for the whole year than they had had for some years past. In January the register showed 239 and in December 236. The present year, they had opened with a full school. One of the outstanding features in the school life during the past year was the splendid health of the children.

Phyllis Anderson was congratulated on winning the S.P.C.A. cup, awarded to Girl Guides for the best essay on a subject set by the Society. The Guides were not to be beaten by their younger sisters, and under the capable leadership of Jean Ho Tung, another Old Girl, they had this year won the Prince of Wales Banner, which Mrs. Southern very kindly presented to them last week.

Referring to the University Examinations held in November, the Headmistress said that all Class 1 sat for the senior and all Class 2 for the junior examination. Out of a total of 19 candidates, the school had 16 passes.

In conclusion, Miss Sawyer said: "I have still one pleasing announcement to make, and that is that Mr. Woo Hay-tong has presented the school with $240 a year to be devoted to scholarships which shall be known as the Woo Hay-tong scholarships. There are no conditions attached except that the sum shall be awarded each year on a decision arrived at by Mr. Woo Hay-tong and the head mistress. This year the holders are as follows:—Cynthia Cheung (Class 4), Cynthia Sanh (Class 5) and Janet Broadbridge (Class 6). The tuition fees of these children are covered by these scholarships."

Mr. Hornell, in the course of his speech, made reference to the wonderful life one could lead in Hong Kong, and exhorted the students of the Diocesan School to do their utmost to make their school life as happy as possible. The speaker said that school life was very different to-day from what it was 20 or 30 years ago, and added that youth was insisting on its rights nowadays with results which were generally good.

ALLEGED FUGITIVE

CHINESE FROM INDO-CHINA AGAIN REMANDED

COUNSEL'S PROTEST

Mr. E. W. Hamilton again had before him at the Central Magistracy yesterday, the Chinese whose extradition is applied for by the Governor-General of Indo-China on a charge of alleged offences against the bankruptcy laws.

In applying for a further adjournment in order to have the papers translated from the French, Mr. Somerset Fitzroy, Assistant Attorney-General, argued at length that in order to carry out the treaty with the French Government the alleged fugitive could not be discharged even though he had already been in custody for a length of time. The papers were there and the Crown was entitled to get an adjournment.

Mr. F. H. Loseby, for the fugitive, protested against a further adjournment. He reviewed the history of the case and argued that it was not a matter of law but one entirely for the Magistrate's discretion.

His Worship decided to give another adjournment until next Friday intimating that by then he would expect something definite from the Crown.

NOT SERIOUS

FORGED OPIUM LABELS IN KOWLOON

NO CASE FOR SESSIONS

At the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, Mr. T. S. Whyte-Smith passed sentence of six months' hard labour on a 17-year-old Chinese youth who was charged with forging opium labels. There were also other charges of possession of a die bearing an impression resembling the Government opium label, and possession of 207 false labels at No. 141, Wuhu-street. In connection with the latter charge, two elderly Chinese were jointly charged with the youth.

His Worship decided that there was no evidence against the two men and discharged them. The two additional charges against the youth were also not proceeded with.

An application by Mr. J. D. Lloyd, Superintendent of Imports and Exports, to have the case treated as one for committal to the Criminal Sessions was overruled by his Worship, who said that he could not agree that the case was "a serious form of forgery, as forgeries went."

WEIGHTS OUT

FOUR HANDICAP RACES
TO-DAY

FORM OF THE "SUBS."

Mr. C. M. S. Alves and Mr. H. W. Moon, the official handicappers of the Hong Kong Jockey Club, have issued the weights for the two handicap races (each with two classes) for the fourth day, to-day, of the annual meeting at Happy Valley.

The handicaps are interesting and useful also for comparative purposes for other races. When respective weights (based on the principle of weight for inches) are considered, a line as to official opinion of "form" can be taken.

For instance, in the Tytam Handicap "A" class, King's Falloch (167 lbs.) actually concedes The Jamaica, The Pheasant and The Sun (all handicapped at 163 lbs.) 4 lbs. (all handicapped at 163 lbs.) 4 lbs. each. On weight for inches as per scale, however, King's Falloch ought to carry 3 lbs. more than The Jamaica and The Sun and 6 lbs. more than The Pheasant. Therefore, in the handicappers' opinion, The Pheasant (although carrying less) is really 2 lbs. better than King's Falloch—over a distance of a mile—and 3 lbs. better than The Jamaica and The Sun; and King's Falloch only 1 lb. better than The Jamaica and The Sun.

Therefore, as far as possible, the weights allotted in the handicaps should be consulted even in the races for non-winners, etc., of which there are several on the card.

Choice of jockey—other than stable connections—has often proved a useful guide to form, the best jockeys being offered the best mounts.

The weights follow:—

CUBAN POLITICS

"SYSTEM OF WHOLESALE ASSASSINATION"

STRONG ALLEGATION

New York, Yesterday. The arrest of eight men, including three prominent professional men of Havana, in connection with an alleged insurrectionary plot throughout Cuba against President Machado has provoked the retort from Senor Selgie, founder of the Cuban Nationalist Party, that the Party was merely aiming to curtail President Machado's "system of wholesale assassination by the means of feeding his political opponents to the man-eating sharks in Havana harbour."

Senor Selgie alleges that President Machado's only reply to a recently authenticated case when a man's arm was found inside a shark was to prohibit further shark fishing in the harbour.—Reuter's American Service.

A feature of the Stock Exchange to-day was the sharp rise to prices of oil shares on the announcement of an increase of 2 1/4 d. per gallon in petrol, in conjunction with reports of an agreement between Anglo-American Oil Company and Russian interests regarding the marketing of oil in Great Britain.—British Wireless Service.

MEXICAN BANDITS

ASSASSINS OF AMERICAN ENGINEERS KILLED

Mexico City, Yesterday. Ten members of the gang of bandits which assassinated two American mining engineers have been killed in a battle with Federal troops.

The murdered men were Mr. J. M. Underwood and Mr. C. Calisthorpe, both of whom were engaged in engineering work at the Bustos Mines.

The mines were raided by a band of about thirty armed bandits, who surprised the two Americans in their quarters and kidnapped them.

The warning was given, and military police immediately went out in chase of the bandits. After a long pursuit they overtook their quarry, and a fight took place between members of the bandit gang and the troops. Five of the kidnappers were shot dead after which the gang dispersed.

The bodies of the two engineers were found near the scene of the fight.—Reuter's American Service.

LIFE OF MOSES

UNIQUE FIGURE IN HISTORY

["The Life of Moses" by Edmond Flag; (Victor Gollancz Ltd., 12/6 net.)]
When I was a very small boy I was taught verses on the Burial of Moses one of which ran:—
"That was the grandest funeral That ever passed on earth And no man heard the tramping Or saw the train go forth."
Thus, long before I had any conscious idea of the beliefs or references implied, I had imbibed certain views about Moses which must have left a permanent impression. It was not till much later that these impressions began to fade.

Most of us in our early school days read the accounts of Romulus and Remus and Numa Pompilius; and it was not till years afterwards that the historicity of the Roman Kingship was even questioned. The gradual realization of the mythical element in the early classical history paved the way for a similar outlook towards the Hebrew legends, till Samson became a solar myth and Moses the synthesis of tribal unity and endeavour.

A Life of Moses strikes one as being in some ways rather strange, and naturally forces to the surface the two great viewpoints from which the Mosaic tradition may be considered. We have the frankly poetic viewpoint where, as with Achilles or Aeneas, the whole is swathed in epic grandeur and miraculous achievement. This is quite evidently the attitude of this book. And of course it is really the only attitude to take. But under these circumstances such a book as the present one ought to be in verse—a great epic or other poem, like the Odyssey or the Light of Asia. A matter-of-fact life in prose seems little more reasonable than a life of Adam, and might almost verge on the comic.

Downright Realistic

There is the other type of account of Moses, of the downright realistic order. Moses is by Mr. Gladstone or Lloyd George or Mussolini (tastes will differ as to the modern equivalent) transported a few centuries back. Hard unimaginative writers can picture Moses for us as a hygienic reformer, the gifted precursor of Lister or Pasteur. We are asked to believe that the savage practices of circumcision and the taboo on pork were great hygienic and sanitary institutions like inoculation or antiseptics—but of course born out of due time. As well might we believe that the custom of the couvade was a piece of foresight in hygienic gynaeology. A lot has yet to be learned about the origins and affinities of the group of beliefs which are epitomised in the Torah. But we must always remember that they are a heritage handed down by immemorial custom from a savage past—and the savage is not a simple, but a very complex creature. The simplicity, the directness and the utility are the invention of civilisation, and are a matter of yesterday. A recent publication has put this new point for us with wonderful force and accuracy; and we cannot do better than reiterate it.

"Savagery with its numerous taboos, its occultism and fetish, its complex ritualism, is mentally more intricate than civilisation. The minds of savages are even more tortuous than they are confused; they are misdirected by error classifications and encumbered with symbolism, metaphor, metonymy and elaborate falsifications; there is always irrational elaboration and disingenuousness."
When one reads an account of the motions of the earth and the tilting of its axis, one is inclined to speculate on the possible geographical and climatic conditions that might be if there were no temperature zone or if the diurnal rotation were reversed; so when one reads the life of Moses one naturally wonders what would have been the state of modern religious belief if the Christian Tradition had come down through Greek or Roman channels instead of through the Hebrew Tradition—if the hard outlines of Sinai and the unproductive Syrian desert had been replaced by the flowing robes of Aphrodite and the whispering auguries of Delphi or Dodona: Or in theological phrase, if God had chosen Pythagoras or Plato as the effective vehicle instead of Moses.

Monothelism of the Desert
Of course the Christian Church as it spread to Alexandria and into the Mediterranean basin gradually left the severe monothelism of the desert behind. Isis, Horus, Osiris, Athene, and Dionysus in their more permeating phases were incorporated in the Church Tradition especially towards the south. The restrictions on image worship were moderated or toned down and the Religion gradually assumed its modern eclectic form. Some modern writers argue that some aspects of the present Christian Tradition depend almost as much on Plato as on Moses (See Dean Inge: "The Platonic Tradition in English Religious Thought"). But we must admit that the appearance of a book like this is a foot of preceding Colman.

BUDDHA'S TEACHING

NEW TRANSLATION FROM THE PALI

THE "EIGHT STEPS"

["The Word of the Buddha" by Nyanathoka, (Mahathera) the Maha-Bodhi Press.]
The text of this book is a translation from the Pali, which contains the actual words and teachings of The Buddha.

It is divided into four main sections, namely: "The Noble Truth of Suffering," "The Noble Truth of the Origin of Suffering," "The Noble Truth of the Extinction of Suffering," "The Noble Truth of the Path that leads to the Extinction of Suffering." "The last Truth" is fully dwelt upon, and this forms the main part of the book, as the Eight Steps along the Path that leads to the Extinction of Suffering, each have a chapter devoted to their study.

The eight steps are:—
(1) Right Understanding.
(2) Right Mindfulness.
(3) Right Speech.
(4) Right Action.
(5) Right Living.
(6) Right Effort.
(7) Right Attention.
(8) Right Concentration.

The true disciple of The Buddha, must follow strictly along this eightfold Path, so that he may finally realise the "Law of Deliverance from Suffering." All those Steps are described and discussed in minute detail, and the text is freely interspersed with notes and references, which help one to read more intelligently.

The closing pages describe the laws which govern the lives of the Buddhist monks, which of course consist chiefly of the strict application of all teachings mentioned above, to the daily life. The reward for such virtue is the elevation of the Disciple to the position of a Holy Man, who by putting away all thoughts of the World and the evil it contains, lives only in a state of calm and Holy meditation: this is considered to be the "Law of Deliverance."

For any but those who are students of this Religion, this is a very difficult book to read without whole-time concentration. Even though one grasps the idea of the high ideals aimed at, as taught by the Buddha, the language of the text is very technical and would be very difficult for anyone except a student of either the Buddhist Religion, or Psychology to follow with any intelligence.

FANTASTIC TALES

Incidents "True To Life"

It has been said that the monotony of everyday life is of no use to the successful novelist, and that he must seek strange, and unusual—and highly improbable—occurrences to crowd into his best sellers.

There may be books which answer this description, but the average reader is wholly delighted with incidents "true to life" when they are so pleasantly related as in Sir James Barrie's works.

What a real change from the ultra-sophisticated novel is the tale of his mother, given to us in Margaret Ogilvy's

Simple Pleasures
Here we have quaint glimpses of a personality which is at once strange and simple. His relationship with his mother is tenderly portrayed. Simple pleasures are surrounded by a beauty all their own, and the author does not, for a moment, permit his reader to taste the flatness of boredom.

The White Bird can be read to the children in the nursery to their huge delight, but you are likely to get a lot of pleasure out of it, too. It is one of those fantasies quickly read, and which becomes more delightful every time it is perused.

For a Few Minutes
Its charm is so compelling that you can pick it up for a few minutes' read, and find, no matter to what part of the book you turn, you are thoroughly absorbed and fascinated as though this were your first acquaintance with the story of David's happy childhood, and his wonderful adventures in Kensington Gardens. A Window in Thrums is a witty volume, packed with typical examples of Sir James Barrie's great sense of humour.

His plays are readable, too, which cannot be said of every modern playwright, many of whose plays have to be witnessed, to be understood. Of Peter Pan I can say nothing that would enhance it in the eyes of its readers. It must already occupy a prominent position. Even those who have not read Barrie's books have seen, perhaps many times, this very enjoyable Christmas play.

There is nothing forced about his work. For his homely narratives are combined with an imagination which always carries his readers into the bright whences it comes. Marion Morton in the "Singapore Free Press."

GUARDED HALO

DAY DREAMS FOR THE DRAB

["The Guarded Halo" by Margaret Pedler (Hodder and Stoughton).]

When their uncle dies leaving them penniless, Shirley Wilson and her brother find it difficult to live. After some time she takes a post as companion to Kit Harford who has had to divorce her husband (of which the visible sign is a lurking mockery in her eyes) and goes to France with Kit and her brother, Simon Drake. Simon loves Shirley, but she loves Neil Kenwyn, a strong man who rescues her from being cut off by the tide, but will not ask her to marry him because he is under a cloud. Readers of Miss Pedler will know, of course, that he is only shielding another, and will not be surprised to find that the other is the dead son of the delicate, exquisite old lady, and her gruff but kindly husband to whom Shirley and her brother afterwards go together as secretary and companion respectively.

After various other complications involving a temperamental dancer, the wife of the dead Ronnie, all ends well.

This is the plot of an earlier book of Miss Pedler's, "The Barbarian Lover" repeated almost exactly, only with France doing duty instead of India for a little foreign local colour. The characters are all impossibly noble and tiresome in their persistent misunderstandings, the plot has not even novelty or rapidity of movement to recommend it.

Like many other novels of its type it may furnish a few day dreams for the drab, but it bears little relation to real life.

Emulates O. Henry

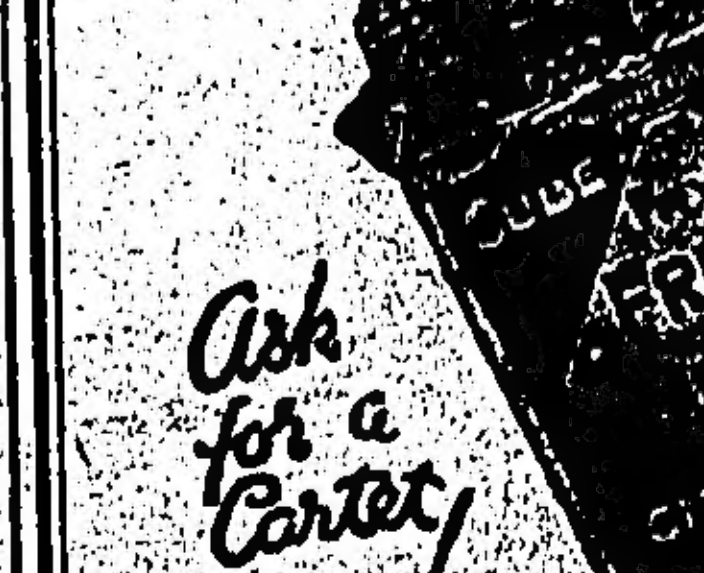

John L. Murphy (above), whose war stories have won him fame as a fiction writer, was made eligible for pardon when his sentence for burglary was commuted by Governor Donahay of Ohio. Murphy's literary career is the second to start within the walls of the Columbus State penitentiary, for it was in this prison that O. Henry won first laurels as a weaver of short stories.

CIVIL SERVICE PENSIONS

AN EXTENSION

AFFECTING GOVERNORS OF MANDATED TERRITORIES

MR. J. H. THOMAS' SUPPORT

London, Yesterday.
In the House of Commons, Mr. Ormsby Gore, Under-Secretary for the Dominions, moved the second reading of the Bill providing for an extension of the Civil Service Pensions to Governors of mandated territories. He said there had come into association with the British Empire this new form of dependency for which Governors had to be provided, and unless there was a change in the statute it would not be possible to pay the same pension to a Governor of Mandated Territory as was paid to Governors of Colonies and Protectorates. A small committee had been set up to go into what was necessary to do justice to the Governors of Mandated Territories and they had presented a report. The Bill, in the main, gave effect to recommendations of that committee. Mr. J. H. Thomas, who was Colonial Secretary in the Labour Government, supported the Bill. He observed that it remedied a grievance and was long overdue. The bill was read a second time without a division.—British Wireless Service.
